Sufficient white paint is available on G132 for comparison purposes with any paint which was used in the primary office envelope during this period it was supposed to be stored.

The Black paint inside Q132 is soft plastic - black enamel. This paint is of the type known as synthetic enamel. A sufficient amount is present for comparison with known specimens should any be located.

The white paint on the outside of Q132 became attached to the paper before its present soiled condition as is shown by the light paper beneath each deposit of paint.

~~From the location, the temperature & humidity~~

A determination of the age of the <sup>white</sup> paint spots on Q132 would depend upon many unknown factors such as the relative humidity, and surroundings of the envelope and of present Kisseloff 25487 to be determined. over

J. DAVID WHITTAKER CHAMBERS PERJURY

ATTENTION: FBI LABORATORY

There are enclosed herewith, nine sheets of typewriting specimens obtained by an Agent of the Philadelphia Office from a Woodstock Typewriter, Serial Number N 168983.

Since it has been impossible to ascertain the original purchaser of this typewriter, and further, since it appears that the range of serial numbers of Woodstock typewriters manufactured during the year 1927 is between approximately 160,000 and 177,000, these specimens have been obtained for comparison with questioned specimens already in the hands of the Laboratory.

After the examination has been completed, the specimens may be destroyed.

Mr. Percy H. Evans,

Dear Sir:

The "Life Insurance Courant", August 1929 issue records the 20 year dividend experiences of various Companies. I note that on page #405 the Metropolitan net cost items have used special settlement dividend equal to 10% of the policy's terminal reserve in the cash value and further that they have made mention of the maturity dividend of $100.

I was under the impression that these extras only pertained to the special $5,000 contract. Was the dividend made retro-active in connection with all policies?

I would appreciate any information you may furnish in this connection.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sir:

Your Letter Feb. 13th.
I recently requested you to furnish some information regarding Dr. Longnecker and felt that it was proper for me to furnish you with a copy of a plan which is workable in connection with the Continental American new policy.

The second sheet I believe is self-explanatory since an additional $10,000 policy on the Term Plan can be purchased to provide for settlement under our Option "B" while the $10,000 Ordinary Life policy will remain with the Company under option "A". The cost is in favor of Northwestern.

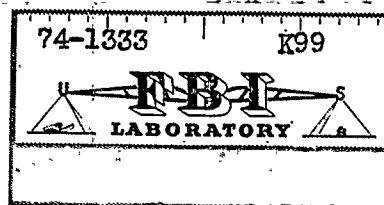

This is forwarded as a matter of information.

Mr. E. G. Fassel,
Assistant Actuary.

Dear Sir:

Yesterday I had the opportunity of discussing a case with William E. Crary, Assistant Actuary of the Provident Mutual Life. I was surprised to learn that his Company would make a change to a lower premium policy and thereby proportionally increase the amount of Insurance as of the original date. The case for your information follows:

Date of birth of the insured - March 17, 1872.
Present insurable age 58. The Provident issued a 20-Payment 25-Year Endowment policy at age 40 dating from August 28, 1912 with an annual premium of $218.50. On this basis you can see that the premium payments will cease with the 1931 premium.

There is a loan on the policy of $1525.00, interest accruing at 6%. The theory advanced by the Provident for changing to Ordinary Life follows:

Endowment Premium

$43.70 per $1,000

Ordinary Life Premium

$30.25 per $1,000.

The endowment premiums totaled $218.50. This would have purchased at the original date, $7223.00 of Ordinary Life protection and figuring on the 18th year cash value would involve a refund to the insured of approximately $1175.00.

It is true that by letting the policy run its regular course, the insured receives the benefit of the full cash value. Do you think it would be to the insured's advantage to allow a total value of $2203.00 remain with the Company and continue paying the Ordinary Life Premium? Do you think it a wise procedure under the circumstances to purchase new Insurance instead of making the change? For your information, if the same plan could be pursued with other Insurance, I am sure that his policies with the Provident could be doubled.

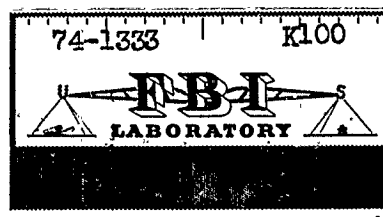

I am arranging the Insurance program of Dr. Longnecker who is also insured with this Company, and would appreciate your prompt response.

Very truly yours,

HLM*AC

At an early date I want to give the Philadelphia Agency of the Northwestern a talk on the Company itself and the most desirable forms of Insurance for both Company and insured. I shall appreciate greatly the fullest information on this subject you may care to give.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your letter of July 8 giving me the Option Settlement as applied on Frank E. Barger policies Nos. 1970390 and 1987361.

Mr. Barger is anxious to have the same form of settlement apply on a new policy for which I expect to have the examination made during the next week. Will you be good enough to forward the Option Settlement form required to have this feature supplement the application?

The new policy will carry with it the same provisions and Option Settlement as drafted by your Department.

Attention: FBI LABORATORY

Dear Sir:

Rebutel January 3, 1949, requesting contact with the Rosehill Cemetery, Chicago, to obtain any typewritten specimens in the file pertaining to the FANSLER family plot.

Mr. JOHN B. VERCOE, President, Rosehill Cemetery Company, 5800 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, on January 4, 1949 produced their file No. 1645 pertaining to Lot 13, Section 112, which originally was purchased by THOMAS L. FANSLER, father of PRISCILLA HISS. Upon examination of this file by Mr. VERCOE and Special Agent WESLEY A. ANDERSON of this office, it was ascertained that the only typewritten communications from members of the FANSLER family in possession of the cemetery are the following:

1. Typewritten letter on the letterhead of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company dated April 11, 1925 and signed by THOMAS L. FANSLER.
2. Typewritten letter on the letterhead of the same company dated November 13, 1925, signed by THOMAS L. FANSLER.
3. Typewritten letter on the letterhead of the same company dated November 25, 1925, signed by THOMAS L. FANSLER.

The handwriting of Alger, Missile Miss and Chambers was compared with one or two appearing in the Knight Armstrong register Q161 but nothing of significance was noted. However it was not possible to <sup>definitely</sup> connect the writing of Miss with the entry <sup>of Mrs</sup> J. H. Fast, Robert Fast and Betty Ann Fast under date of Aug 29, 1937 as the style of writing is somewhat like <sup>the</sup> style of writing. How-alike the writing of Miss for a <sup>conclusive</sup> conclusion.

~~Photographic copies of the handwriting of the above entry, Robert Fast, under date of Aug 29, 1937, are

Reference: Letter dated April 6, 1949

Examination requested: Document

Specimens:

K736 A two-page letter typewritten on letterhead stationery of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, dated at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 31, 1929 to Mr. Harry L. Martin, c/o Mr. J. J. Carroll, 209 Algonquin Blvd., Oakbrook, Wisconsin, signed Martin L. Lee L.R.

RESULTS OF EXAMINATION:

The typewriting listed above as specimen K736 was compared with the typewriting appearing on specimens 45 and 46 through 49. The conclusion was reached that specimen 45 was not typed by the same machine which typed K736. Inasmuch as there are nine years intervening when K736 and specimens 46 through 49 were typed a definite conclusion could not be reached in regard to a comparison of K736 with 46 through 49, as a machine could develop numerous defects in nine years of use. Specimens 46 through 49 show many typewriting defects which do not appear in the typewriting K736. However, there are several defects appearing in 46 through 49 that also appear in K736. Due to the fact that such defects are of minor nature while there are other defects in the questioned specimens that do not appear in K736 the known specimen cannot be definitely eliminated or identified with 46 through 49.

K736 will be photographed and returned to the Philadelphia Office within the next several days.

JANUARY 1947. RECENT INVESTIGATION BY THE UNITED STATES MARSHAL SERVICE, BALTIMORE, OF DOCUMENTS AND MATERIALS ON SUBJECT, HAVE REVEALED THAT DOCUMENTS OBTAINED FROM INVESTIGATION OF SUBJECTS APPEAR ON QUOTE'S STRIPS A AND B UNQUOTE. DUE TO POOR QUALITY OF A AND B DEFINITE CONCLUSION CANNOT BE REACHED WHETHER DOCUMENTS DEPICTED THEREIN WERE IN FACT SAME SOURCE AS THOSE OF STANDARD DOCUMENTS. THESE POSITIONS VISIBLE IN DOCUMENTS DEPICTED ON STRIPS A AND B IN FACT EXTENSIVE COVERAGE ~~FOR~~ FAVORABLE WITH THE SAME POSITION OF THE CORRESPONDING BUREAU OF STANDARDS DOCUMENTS. HOWEVER TOO LARGE A PORTION OF THE DOCUMENTS DEPICTED ON A AND B IS ILLEGIBLE TO MAKE A DEFINITE CONCLUSION POSSIBLE. BUREAU OF STANDARDS DOCUMENTS NOT BEING EMPLOYED FOR IDENTIFICATION PURPOSES AT THIS TIME.

Q5 typing corresponds most closely to Royal Standards - however differences between Q5 and Underwood Standards for distinctive elite are microscopic and it is conceivable these differences may be caused by condition of ribbon, paper, or wear of typewriter & ∴ the possibility of an Underwood having been used cannot be absolutely eliminated. Machine may have undergone repairs which may have involved the installation of the Royal numeral 7.

A Neater Letter—Quicker—Better

The Woodstock is worthy. It is characterized by great durability. We have not turned aside from the standard principles of typewriter construction. We have been able to benefit by drawing from the rich background of basic features that have been built into writing machines for years. We have improved upon these and have added other exclusive features that are essential to dependable and uninterrupted service in the business office.

NOTE

The Woodstock is not merely another competitive machine, for if it were only just as good there would be positively no reason for it in the market. Investigate the Woodstock. Try the touch—feel how light and responsive it is. It represents the greatest progress and offers the finest improvements to be found in any writing machine today.

Question: Is it possible to forge typewriters.

There is a possibility it might be accomplished but it would take considerable time and be a really insurmountable task. It would be necessary to ~~have~~ information regarding the characteristics of a person to be well versed in typewriter defects and similarities of type design ~~or have such information as~~ to reconstruct a typewriter so that it would possess all the characteristics of ~~another typewriter~~ every character of another typewriter.

I testified at the first and second of these trials that the Baltimore documents #5 - #9 and #11 - #47 were typed on the same typewriter that was used to type the known standards, if documents described as follows:

1. Three pages of typewriting headed "Description of personal characteristics of Timothy Nelson", dated September 9, 1936 and was unsigned. (Govt. exhibit #19B.)

2. Three pages of typewriting, unsigned, and headed "President's Report for the year 1936 -- 1937" (Govt. exhibit #22)

3. One page of <sup>typewriting</sup> addressed to, "Mr W. M. Hillegast, Director of Admissions, University of Maryland, Baltimore, Maryland." The letter was signed Priscilla Fawcett Hiss, and dated May 25, 1937. (Exhibit #17)

4. One page letter <sup>on envelope</sup> in typewriting dated June 12, 1931 addressed to "Miss Emma L. Helling, The Free Library, Logan Square, Philadelphia, Pa." (Govt. exhibit #21)

When I testified at both trials the characteristics used by me in court in demonstrating my conclusions, were those appearing in the letters, g, l, i, o, u, h, d, c, r and A. This does not mean that my identification of the known typewriting standards and the typewriting on the Baltimore documents was based on only ten characters. <sup>There were many other characteristics in common.</sup> I also made the various examinations and comparisons <sup>of the typewriting appearing on those documents</sup> in the F.B.I. Laboratory in Wash, D.C. I examined each and every letter and figure of typewriting, the horizontal and vertical spacing, <sup>slant, affects, etc.</sup> et cetera, to determine not only what <sup>individual</sup> characteristics were in common in the questioned and known standards of typewriting, but also to ascertain if there were any unaccounted for differences present. If I would not have reached the conclusion that the Baltimore documents <sup>and known standards</sup> were typed by the same typewriter.

JAHAM
ESPIONAGE - R

There is set forth hereafter a summary of the information obtained by Special Agent James C. Cadigan as a result of his observation of the work of defense experts EVELYN EHRLICH, ELIZABETH McCARTHY and Dr. DANIEL P. NORMAN in Boston from April 1 to April 8, 1952.

Dr. NORMAN is the head of the New England Spectrochemical Laboratories with laboratories in Boston and Ipswich, Massachusetts. He was principally interested in the paper used for the Baltimore documents, the envelope in which they were contained and the known standards of typewriting used by the Government in the last two trials of ALGER HISS. He conducted an ultraviolet light examination of the discolorations on the Baltimore documents and was quite interested in the fact that some of these documents are considerably more discolored in one quadrant than in others and also there were more discolorations along the folds. At one time or another, these documents were folded in quarters and it is not unreasonable to believe that if left in a folded condition for some time, as the documents apparently were, then 1/4 of the area would be more stained or discolored than other areas protected by the folding.

From conversations between NORMAN, EHRLICH, McCARTHY and NORMAN's assistants, Mr. Stanley (photographer) and Mr. Johnson (a physicist), NORMAN will conduct detailed physical tests of the paper used, chemical analysis of fillers in the paper, fiber analysis of the six different kinds of paper he says are contained in the Baltimore documents and spectrographic analysis of the paper. NORMAN made numerous photographs, including a complete set of the fronts and backs of the Baltimore documents in color, using Kodachrome film.

JCC:JSB

On one occasion in the Ipswich Laboratory, JOHNSON's notebook was available for a short time and inasmuch as he had been spending most of the day studying the text of the various Baltimore exhibits, advantage was taken of the opportunity offered and his notes indicated that he was interested in the misspellings, strike overs, margins, et cetera. In this connection, it is noted at the previous two trials neither the Government nor the defense introduced any testimony by an expert to identify the personal characteristics of the typist or otherwise offered proof that the documents had or had not been typed by Mrs. HISS (according to a statement appearing on page 323 of Alistair Cooke's book "A Generation On Trial"). It is believed that in the forthcoming affidavit from NORMAN such an analysis of the personal characteristics of the author of the Baltimore documents will be made and it will be alleged that PRISCILLA HISS was too well educated to make such mistakes. Counterbalancing such an allegation will be the fact that PRISCILLA HISS in her previous testimony said she was not at all skilled in typewriting and that the Woodstock machine used by her was not in too good a mechanical condition. These latter two factors could easily be the cause of mistakes occurring in the typewritten documents and at the same time it is quite possible that she would not make the same mistakes in handwritten material.

At NORMAN's Ipswich residence an old Woodstock typewriter was seen on a porch which had evidently been out in the weather for some time since considerable rusting was evident. It is believed that NORMAN is conducting an experiment to determine how much damage weathering will do to a machine of this type although it is difficult to determine the exact value of such an experiment since the condition of the machine after it was discarded by the HISS' would not have any effect on typewriting characteristics put on paper while the machine was still in the possession of the HISS'.

From his conversations, NORMAN apparently has done quite a bit of work for various textile concerns in New England and it is felt that he has the necessary technical skill to conduct the various physical and chemical tests of the paper comprising the Baltimore documents. However, since he does not claim to be a document expert it is possible that he will err in his evaluations of the results obtained or lay undue stress on one particular aspect of his examinations assigning certain causes to certain results which might not be in conformity with the actual causes. This will be particularly true if he has started with the preconceived notion that the Baltimore papers are forgeries and were not prepared in 1938 and wishes to find some evidence he thinks will support a finding of forgery.

Conversations between NORMAN, ERNLICH and McCARTHY indicate that the original HISS typewriter is in a bank vault and under the control of NORMAN who has had the type faces cleaned and known specimens prepared.

It might be well to point out here that since the original HISS machine and the reconstructed typewriter are under the control of the defense experts, then any offers of proof of forgery based on these machines or the products of them are contestable.

In the original affidavit filed by ELIZABETH McCARTHY she indicated that at the request of CHESTER T. LANE she assisted in an experiment involving the duplication of a set of typewriter defects on one machine by using a second machine of the same make and model. In her affidavit she said that she examined the product of the experimental machine and pointed out the respects in which the attempted duplication had not been successful. It would therefore appear that if the defense is contending that this actually took place and that the HISS machine was not used to prepare the Baltimore documents, then they would have to introduce evidence to show that CHAMBERS or someone associated with him had the necessary technical and mechanical skill required to alter a typewriter and even more important to show that CHAMBERS or his associates had the necessary technical skill of a qualified document examiner to determine not only the defects in material typewritten on one machine, but also to determine the mechanical fault responsible for the defects. If such evidence cannot be advanced, then it would seem that the defense's theory is only a theory.

MCCARTHY and EHRLICH both worked on the Baltimore documents at Mrs. EHRLICH's residence at 417 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, where EHRLICH maintains a laboratory.

MCCARTHY examined the various Baltimore documents and known standards as a document expert and as such was interested in the paper, the discoloration of the paper, the over-all appearance of the typewriting, the defects present, et cetera. She constantly would arrive late in the morning and quit early in the afternoon, one one occasion showing up at 2:00 and quitting around 4:30. She constantly complained about the huge volume of material to examine (only 82 items in all), took frequent breaks to "rest my eyes," was willing to discuss any subject with anybody present and in general wasted much of the working day. If these experts are being paid on a day to day basis, they are making it last.

It is noted that in her previous affidavit relative to the possible duplication of typing McCARTHY stated "Nevertheless it is my opinion based upon my long experience in methods of questioned document examinations, that the duplication has progressed to such degree that an expert in the field, however highly qualified, would find it difficult if not impossible to distinguish between samples from the two machines." McCARTHY in filing her affidavit based on her examination of the original Baltimore exhibits may well contend that it is impossible to determine whether the original Baltimore documents were prepared on the HISS machine or on a reconstructed or duplicated machine basing part of her argument on the fact that if one man (Tytell) could do it so could others. Again she may claim that the Baltimore documents were not prepared either on the HISS machine nor typed by PRISCILLA HISS and that the Government's expert was completely in error.

Whatever conclusions are reached by McCARTHY, it is believed that our Bureau experts are considerably more experienced and qualified in this field than she is and will be able to satisfactorily rebut her claims.

ERLICH, according to her previous affidavit, has been concerned with the technical examination and conservation of prints, drawings, manuscripts and typography. She appears to be a more industrious worker than McCARTHY and confines her examinations solely to the individual typewritten characteristics and had no apparent interest in the over-all document problems involved in this case. She would spend most of the day in examining the various Baltimore documents and known standards and then the following day take a series of photomicrographs, among them the lower case letters a, y, c, j, g, e, r, t, f, u, c, e, k, the upper case letter A and the numerals 7 and 8.

In the course of conversation with her she indicated that some years ago she had been commissioned by the Government to make certain studies of the original Declaration of Independence, at the time being stored in Fort Knox. She also indicated that frequently she is called upon to examine rare books and manuscripts of considerable value. It is noted that in her previous affidavit ERNLICH stated that she had compared a photocopy of the HISS standard (Government's Exhibit 46B) and specimens of typing from the so-called HISS machine in Mr. LANE's possession and that on the basis of that comparison it was her opinion that it was entirely possible that the so-called HISS machine is not the machine which was used to type the HISS standard. She based this conclusion on her observations of certain differences which might not be due to age, normal wear, or to personal typing idiosyncrasies (Examiner's Note: And on the other hand these differences might well be due to age, normal wear, et cetera).

It is believed that the affidavit which will be submitted by ERNLICH will relate only to individual characteristics appearing in the typewriting and that her conclusions will follow along the lines set out in her previous affidavit. While it is not possible to state definitely that ERNLICH has a preconceived opinion that the Baltimore documents are forgeries, it was the examiner's impression that she does so believe and consequently her conclusions may be colored by this. Additionally, it is noted that ERNLICH is not a document examiner and while she may be an excellent photomicrographer and can show differences in individual letters selected by her in the various exhibits it is not felt that she will assign the proper weight to these variations since the defects of a typewriter are not the same as those found in the usual printing equipment for books, manuscripts, et cetera, and lack of fundamental knowledge about the various causes of typewriter defects may lead her into an erroneous interpretation of the evidence actually present.
